Rumney, March 1st, 1881.

REPORT OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE.TO THE CITIZENS OF RUMNEY :

The progress in our schools during the year past has been generally very satisfactory and with two or three exceptions the teachers have secured the confidence of the scholars and the support of the parents. The work of educating the young is not wholly confined to the school-room ; a very important part of it must be done at home and the work of the school would be done with more pleasure and profit if the work at home were performed with more efficiency. It is a very easy matter to judge in a school-room what training a child receives at home. It has been truly said that "the welfare of any community may be represented by its system of the public education of its masses." Our requirements for a teacher are not up to a proper standard, nor can we raise this standard until we pay better wages. It is usually considered that the prudential committee has been very economical if he pays but a small salary even though he succeeds in getting an inferior teacher. What we want are teachers who are alive to their work, to whom teaching is not a tedious but a pleasant task. We want teachers who will teach practically, what the text book teaches in theory. Practical knowledge, not theory is what the young mind most needs for its development. Then we want the best text-books, those which are clear, comprehensive and of recent date. Our school-rooms are deficient in illustrative apparatus as maps, blocks, for explaining the square and cube roots, and a dictionary for reference. I believe a few dollars expended for this purpose would be very beneficial to our schools. It is a very common fault here as elsewhere to hurry scholars from one book to a higher one faster than their knowledge of the book left warrants them in doing. This matter should be considered more carefully by both parents and teachers before changing. Be certain the child understands perfectly the book he is studying before allowing him to proceed. Our registers show very few visits made by the parents which certainly goes to prove a lack of interest on their part. This is wrong, show your children that you are interested in their school and they will have more interest in it themselves and instead of feeling that their school life is a tedious task they will then feel it only a pleasant duty.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HEATH, M. D.,

Superintending School Committee.
